

Abstract: The aim of the invention is to attain a uniform and homogeneous treatment of substrates in a device comprising at least one process container which is arranged in a gas atmosphere and which contains a treatment fluid. Said process container also comprises at least two openings which are located underneath a treatment fluid surface and through which the substrates are linearly guided. In addition, an overflow for the treatment fluid is provided.